U.S. Patent & TMO/c/TM Mail Rcpt Dt. #78

Madam:

In response to the official action of August 1, 2003, attached are additional specimens for Class 39 together with a declaration verifying that these specimens were in use prior to the extended date for filing the statement of use. Obviously, the exact specimen was not in use because the date of access is in October 2003. Nevertheless, the basic format of the Web site and the use of the applicant's mark have not changed since the filing of the original statement of use.

The examining attorney has found the specimens for Class 42 to be acceptable. An objection was raised with respect to the Class 39 specimens. In addition to designing and customizing software for others, applicant operates its own travel agency services on line whereby reservations and booking for transportation can be made. The specimens illustrate such usage.

In view of this submission, early acceptance of the specimens is requested. It is believed that the application will now be in condition for registration. Since the specimen issue in Class 39 is under final, applicant has filed a notice of appeal in the event that this reply is found to be unresponsive.

Respectfully submitted,

ALSTON & BIRD LLP

 TRAVEL APPROVAL AS WORKFLOW IN cytric
 The procedures for travel approval must be easy to use and quick to operate for both the traveler as well as the approver. cytric offers various highly efficient solutions, which streamline the approval process before the departure. These include smart filter settings for the enforcement of corporate travel policies as well as comprehensive reporting functions.
 Choice of Several Processes
 With both Standard and Enhanced Approval Systems, cytric offers optimal customizability for the travel and booking process in the corporation, and ensures that travel policies are followed. cytric takes preferred airlines and service classes into account, in addition to travel destinations.
 In the Standard Approval System, a trip is considered approved when, for example, it is not denied by the recipient of the request. In the Enhanced mode, the trip approval can be subject to up to three levels of security with any number of approvers. Normally, the approval of the request must be given by the recipient. In the absence of this approval the booking will be
